Mysterious Woman Found In A Most Mysterious Way

Who Is Jane Doe and Who Put Her Here?

When a strange smell started to permeate the St. Elizabeth Catholic Church, law officials were called out to the scene and made a grizzly discovery. Two severed hands, were located as the source of the smell, in the main sanctuary's grand piano.

The officials are keeping everything tight-lipped, but they have disclosed that there are no suspects at this time, and would appreciate any information anyone may be able to provide.

The victim, appears to be female between the ages of 20 and 35.

If anyone has any information regarding a missing person, or someone acting strange, please contact the police department.

The quiet catholic church is very shaken up by such a gruesome discovery in a place that they are used to feeling so safe in.

"We want justice, we want to feel safe again" was a common phrase to be uttered when interviewing the members of St. Elizabeth Catholic Church. One member went so far as to make an accusation towards a fellow church member. "He's not right I tell you. Every Sunday after the service, he's up there staring at that piano. Never plays it. Never touches it. Just walks up to it and stares. At first I thought he had a thing for the young pianist, but he goes whether she's sitting there or not. And when she is sitting there, you get the impression that he doesn't even notice that she's there. Someone needs to take a close look at Ricky Wells."

No official mention has been made of Wells, but several members of the community have become suspect of him.

Pine Creek Register promises to stay on this case, and keep you as updated as the police allow.
